Interactive Voice Response (IVR) is a technology that allows the computer to interact with people. IVR system permits customers to interact with the bank through the telephone keypad, from which they can ask information through IVR dialogue. IVR systems can respond with pre-recorded or dynamically generated audio to further direct users on how to proceed. It is designed to support BKT retail customers on getting information about cards and their accounts and for business customers to report POS issues. Following the verification steps needed, the customer can get information without the need to contact a Contact Center agent during working days (from Monday to Friday between 8:30-19:00).
